

Fictional attorney work sample

Format demonstration only. Every event, date, source description, and observation below is invented. No investigation or collection occurred.

Illustrative assignment

Organize a fictional public workshop schedule and its later revision. The example shows how a chronology separates source statements from observations and connects each entry to a source index. It concerns no real person, client, dispute, or allegation.

Fictional chronology

All dates in this table are synthetic examples, not actual publication or capture records. “Not displayed” illustrates a missing source date.

Record	Example posted date	Example observed date	Illustrative source statement
DEMO 01	Apr 1 2026	Apr 4 2026	A workshop announcement lists May 16 as the event date.
DEMO 02	Not displayed	Apr 4 2026	A calendar entry lists the workshop for May 16 at 10 a.m.
DEMO 03	Apr 10 2026	Apr 11 2026	An update lists a revised event date of May 23.
DEMO 04	Not displayed	Apr 11 2026	A revised calendar entry lists May 23 at 10 a.m.

Illustrative assessment

In this invented sequence, the announced date changes from May 16 to May 23. The entries demonstrate a way to organize differing statements over time. They do not establish who edited a page, whether an event occurred, or whether anyone received notice.

Questions the record would leave open

Who controlled the pages? Are earlier versions available? Were times shown in a stated time zone? What independent records could corroborate the schedule? These would be follow-up questions for counsel within an agreed scope.

Fictional source and evidence index

FICTITIONAL DEMONSTRATION. The addresses below are placeholders on example.com. They were not visited or collected for this sample. No evidence files accompany this document.

Record	Illustrative source address	Record described
DEMO 01	https://example.com/workshop/announcement	Initial event announcement
DEMO 02	https://example.com/workshop/calendar-original	Initial calendar entry
DEMO 03	https://example.com/workshop/update	Schedule revision notice
DEMO 04	https://example.com/workshop/calendar-revised	Revised calendar entry

Collection record in this demonstration

Collection status: none. Collector, actual observation time, capture method, file location, and file digest are not applicable. The DEMO identifiers cross-reference this document only. No screenshots, page exports, hashes, or chain-of-custody records have been created.

Method for an authorized assignment

Within the written scope, review the identified public source and preserve relevant content with its URL and context. Record the actual observation date, time, and time zone separately from any date displayed by the source. Document the collection method, access conditions, saved record identifier, and limitations. Link chronology entries to the saved source records and report later transfers through the agreed delivery process.

Limits of the format

A displayed date may not be a reliable publication date. A page or post may be edited, incomplete, or unavailable. Source content alone may not identify its author or establish the truth of a statement. This sample demonstrates organization and reporting only; it does not demonstrate forensic authenticity or admissibility.
